

In books lies the soul of the whole time past

THOMAS CARLYLE

The Heritage of the Printed Book in Europe Database contains just under 3 million bibliographical records of books, from the beginning of printing to the middle of the 19th century. Searches are carried out across all files provided by the 24 institutions listed. CERL is continually adding new files to the database, widening its scope, coverage and value to scholars. The majority of files consist of high-level bibliographical records created by book-in-hand cataloguing. Some contain records created as a result of retroconversion projects, and these are gradually being replaced by sections of enhanced records.

The HPB Database was originally hosted by RLG, Inc. Since September 2007, the service has been hosted by OCLC, using its FirstSearch and Connexion software. Access is also available by Z39.50.

Files and updates to be added in future years

Records from libraries in the Regione Toscana, Italy; the National Library of the Netherlands (pre-Brinkman file); the Complutense University Library, Madrid; the National Library of Croatia, Zagreb; the University Library of Warsaw; the Law Society's Mendham Collection, Canterbury; the Istituto Centrale per il Catalogo Unico, Rome; the Bibliothèque nationale de France, Paris, as well as legal materials held in the Royal Library in Stockholm and microfilmed German materials held in four Polish libraries are in preparation. In 2008 c.1.2 million new records are scheduled for loading into the HPB Database.

Heritage of the Printed Book in Europe

The HERITAGE OF THE PRINTED BOOK IN EUROPE DATABASE (HPB) offers scholars in all disciplines convenient and reliable access to over 2.75 million items of the European printed heritage, from its earliest beginnings (c.1455) to around 1830. The HPB contains a steadily growing number of catalogue records contributed by libraries, mainly members of the Consortium of European Research Libraries (CERL), an expanding alliance of some 60 major collections, including several in Eastern Europe.

The CERL THESAURUS is being developed by the Data Conversion Group, Göttingen, and contains variants for place names, names in imprints, and author names. This makes it unnecessary for scholars to be aware of all the possible variant forms of names used within catalogues contributed by members across Europe.

The CERL THESAURUS has been expanded with DIGITAL RESOURCES, allowing users to view digital images of printers' devices from McKerrow and Renouard, and links to provenance information held at CERL member institutions.

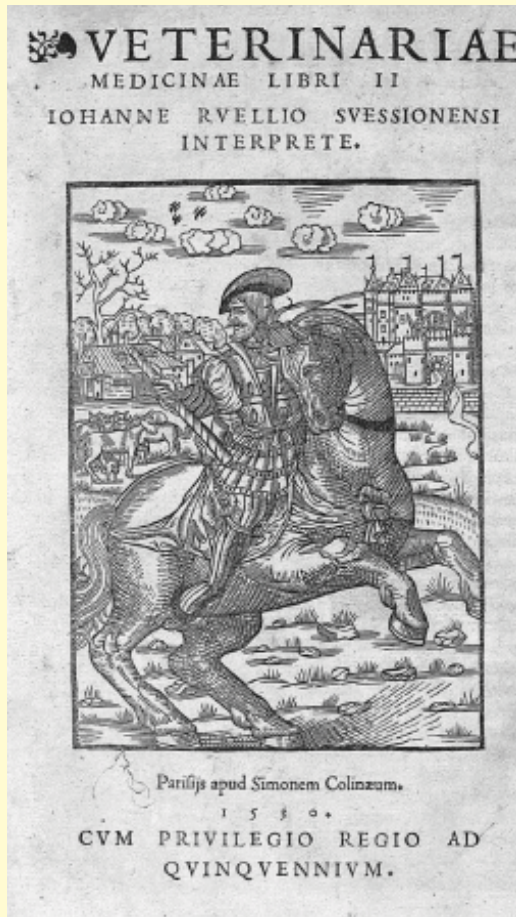

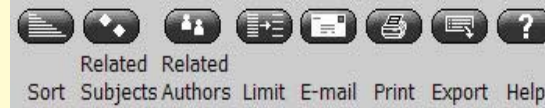

The CERL MANUSCRIPTS PORTAL is being developed in the Electronic Publishing Centre of the University Library of Uppsala and enables scholars and researchers using early printed material to search across the contents of online manuscripts databases, in combination with the HPB Database, by this means overcoming the historical differentiation of printed books and manuscripts in libraries.

Access to HPB Database

HPB is made available free of charge to readers at member libraries. It is available here at the following location(s):

The HPB Database enables scholars to locate and identify items held in many of Europe's major libraries, at a level of detail which makes it possible to evaluate different copies of the same title.
